Vice President, Strategic Alliances

Association for Accessible Medicines (AAM)

Sara Skubikowski is the Vice President of Strategic Alliances at the Association for Accessible Medicines. Sara is responsible for developing and sustaining partnerships that forward AAM's mission and strategic policy goals, and serves as a liaison for AAM's engagement with patient and third-party organizations, groups and coalitions.

Prior to joining AAM, Sara was the Director of Policy Development at the National Patient Advocate Foundation (NPAF), where she developed and implemented strategic policy initiatives to advance the organization's mission, and directed the operations of a regulatory coalition comprised of more than 60 leading patient advocacy organizations.

Sara previously worked at the government relations and public affairs firm of Venn Strategies, LLC as an Assistant Vice President, running the day-to-day operations and communications of multiple trade associations and coalitions. Sara has extensive experience advancing the causes of diverse membership organizations, having managed the external affairs, policy direction and development, federal relations, alliance outreach, grassroots engagement and communications for a variety of associations and nonprofit organizations.

Sara received her Bachelor of Arts from Middlebury College in Vermont with a degree in Political Science.
